- Control of 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 patterns and their subdivisions
- Control of conducting basics, including preparations and cut-offs, cueing, fermatas, dynamics, articulations, tempo changes, complex and irregular meters, phrasing, and expressive gestures

REQUIRED MATERIALS

Text: Phillips, Kenneth H. Basic Techniques of Conducting. New York: Oxford University Press, 1997.

GRADE DISTRIBUTION

Grades will be based on conducting and reading preparation, class participation (which includes attendance), preparation for the ensemble, the midterm, final, and overall improvement. The grade point distribution is as follows:

Conducting and Reading	13%
Participation	14%
(See Grade Distribution for absences)
Videotaping Sessions (7)	35%
Midterm Taping (2)	18%
Final Taping (8 th)	20%

GRADING CRITEREA

Conducting and Reading (13%)

Carefully prepare the music and/or exercises to conduct for the day. You are to treat each conducting opportunity, no matter how brief, as a rehearsal, incorporating the proper conducting preparation, etiquette, form, and technique. Anyone who is not prepared for a class will not conduct that day and will receive no credit for the day.

For every reading assignment, identify three points on a word-processed page to be turned in. Indicate the page, paragraph, and line of each and paraphrase the central theme in a sentence or two. Then, (and most importantly), write a few sentences about your REACTION on this idea (i.e., Do you agree or disagree? Are you confused? Do you need further explanation?). In other words, DO NOT merely paraphrase the text; create a response.

Participation (14%)

Participation is an important part of the grade, as it contains several facets: attendance, class discussion and participation. This class is highly experiential. Much of what you learn in the course happens in the class through discussion and interaction with and observation of others.

Quizzes within the text may be given as part of Participation.

Furthermore, the class members form the conducting ensemble. The ensemble is essential to gaining conducting experience in this class. You will sing and/or play your instruments for each other. Each class member depends on your being there, so there is an ensemble to conduct! Thus, your attendance to every class is essential! Every absence must be cleared with the instructor. Any unexcused absence will result in dropping a third of a grade (ex. A- to B+). Excessive absences may result in failing the course.

Class Videotaping (35%); Midterm Videotaping (18%) and Final Videotaping (20%)

Nine classes during the semester will be videotaped for conducting evaluations and study aids. Each conductor will complete and turn in a post-videotaping self-evaluation form for instructor grading. Each conductor will also play or sing for the other conductors. After the final videotaping, each conductor will meet individually with the instructor for a final course evaluation.
