- Textbook: Leeds, Von Allmen and Schiming, Economics, First Edition
- Other texts: You will also be required to read:
- Heilbroner, R.L. The Worldly Philosophers: The Lives, Times and Ideas of the Great Economic Thinkers
 - Breit, W., and Ransom, R., The Academic Scribblers
- Objectives: Our three main objectives for the semester is to ensure you as a student
- develop familiarity with the principles by which most economists deal with issues of scarcity
 - develop an understanding and ability to use basic economics jargon and models to form logical arguments pertaining to both micro- and macroeconomic issues
 - develop the ability to analyze economic arguments and to think critically about their benefits and consequences
- Evaluation: Your performance evaluation in this course will be based on three components
- Three periodic knowledge accumulation and application assessments (50%)²
 - Knowledge and application retention assessment (25%)
 - Writing evaluation (10%)
 - Take home work (10%)
 - Contribution to the classroom community (5%)
- Community: Attendance will be taken via an attendance book. Because contribution to the classroom community is counted as 5% of your grade, regular attendance is necessary but not sufficient to receive full credit in this category. You need to be an active and willing participant in order to receive maximum credit in this category.

¹ Appointments to meet during other times will be discussed should the need arise

² Missing a periodic assessment will result in the weight of that periodic assessment being distributed across the two other assessments. In the event a second assessment is missed there are two potential resolutions: 1. If both missed assessments have sufficient documentation to deem them unavoidable a provisional contract will be negotiated between the student and instructor or 2. If one or both of the missed assessments is not accompanied by sufficient documentation to deem it (them) unavoidable, only the weight of one of the assessments will be distributed, and the weight of the other will be forfeited by the student.

Classroom: It is an incredibly technologically advanced society we live in and I appreciate that each student has the ability to communicate with just about anyone at anytime. However, this technological capacity comes with the responsibility to use it in a manner that will not infringe upon the rights of others. As such I ask you to silence cellphones, twoways, pagers, etc. If your life/livelihood or the life/livelihood of others depends on you being able to respond to these devices, please minimize the disruption to the best of your ability. With respect to laptops, I do not forbid their use, I do however suggest you evaluate whether this is an effective method for accumulating knowledge, particularly in a class where graphs and formulas are regularly used.

Accommodation: Should you have any individual concerns regarding any disability including, but not limited to hearing, speech, vision, or seating, please discuss this with me during the first week of class in person or via email. Individuals from the counseling center will work with you to verify your need for accommodation and will help determine the environment in which you will have the opportunity to succeed in this course

Integrity: The policy listed in the student handbook is the reference for any questions related to this topic.
