Theatre ticket (~$9). You are required to attend the performance "The Laramie Project" performed by the Moravian College Theatre on March 13-16. Plan ahead and buy your ticket well in advance, since tickets do sell out.

COURSE OBJECTIVES/OUTCOMES: Because literature is a representation of reality and thus invites a variety of interpretations, it provides an ideal framework for reflection upon the moral life. In this course, through our reading and discussion of literary and ethical texts, as well as through related articles from a variety of disciplines, we will consider moral issues concerning: the environment; identity; duties to kin; love, marriage, and sex; racism and sexism. Our goal will be to develop an awareness of the complexity of moral issues and of the need for interdisciplinary understanding in informed decision-making. In grappling with our own values and moral position taking, we will enhance our capacity for moral discernment, criticism, and argument.

COURSE METHOD: This course will consist primarily of reading, discussion, student presentations, and several writing assignments, including an ongoing journal.

EVALUATION: Journal (20%), student presentation (20%); essays (20%, 25%), attendance and participation (15%). It is within the instructor's purview to apply qualitative judgment in determining grades for any assignments and for the final course grade.

READING ASSIGNMENTS: All students will complete the daily reading assignments detailed in the syllabus. In addition, each student will sign up to read one of the excerpted literary works, in its entirety, in preparation for his/her oral presentation. Each student will also be responsible for choosing a recently published secondary article from a scholarly journal in the discipline of his/her major, relating to the day's topic (not necessarily to the day's literary text), to be approved and put on reserve (2 copies) for the class to read at least one week in advance. (See presentation evaluation sheet)

STUDENT PRESENTATIONS: Student presenters will begin each day's discussion with an overview of the day's text, as it relates to the moral topic under consideration (not mere plot summary). Since the rest of the class may have read only an excerpt, the presenter will be the authority on the text, prepared to help throughout the session with questions relating to background and context. The presenter will also explain how the article he/she has assigned (see above) sheds light on the moral issue at hand, and should conclude the presentation with two open-ended ethical questions (one on the literary text, one on the reserve article) designed to begin class discussion. The presentation should be 10-15 minutes in length, and a hard copy of the presentation should be handed in to the instructor.

WRITING ASSIGNMENTS: Apart from occasional in-class writing assignments, there will be three writing projects:

A. An ongoing journal, which I will collect daily, will be a crucial tool in preparing you for class and in generating discussion. Each journal entry will have three to four numbered components:

1. A general comment on the Singer or other main reading, written in light of the ethical issue under consideration. Please read the "Issue" section at the back of the Singer text, responding to any questions posed there. If the day's assignment includes more than one excerpt, choose and address just one of the texts. (100 or more words)
2. A hypothetical situation, real or imagined, that presents a dilemma related to the ethical issue at hand. (150 words or more)
3. A general comment upon the secondary, reserve article. How does it shed light for you on the current topic? (150 words or more)
4. When a section of the Blackburn text has been assigned, comment on the reading, summing it up to the best of your ability (100 words or more)

* At the right hand corner of the journal entry, record your name, the date the assignment is due, the author's name, the title of the work, and a total word count. (You should also include a word count at the end of each of the numbered sections.)

*Your journal entries will be due at the start of each class, and if you have fulfilled the above requirements you will receive full credit for the entry.  Since the journal is designed to enhance class discussion, entries submitted apart from class (due to an absence, even if the entry is submitted in advance) or at the end of class (unless typed) will receive no more than half credit.

B. A 4-5 page essay on a topic to be announced. See "Rubric" (attached).

C. A 4-5 page essay on a topic to be announced. See "Rubric" (attached).

NOTE: Due dates for essays are firm. If for some extraordinary reason you must be late, you need to talk to me. Late papers automatically receive a lower grade.

ATTENDANCE & PARTICIPATION: I cannot emphasize enough how important it is for you to attend each class, promptly, with your assignment read and your journal entry completed. The success of our class depends upon how well we can articulate our individual and collective responses to the readings and to the complex moral issues they pose. I will read off your name at the beginning of each class, both to learn who you are and to keep track of your attendance. It is your responsibility to consult me if you are late or absent. Your participation grade will reflect your regular, voluntary engagement in class discussion. Full attendance without such engagement will earn no more than a grade of D for participation.

*Please turn off and put away all cell phones during class.

ACADEMIC HONESTY: Cheating and plagiarism will not be tolerated. Plagiarism is the misrepresentation of someone else's work as your own. This includes such instances as quoting directly from a published work without giving the author credit (i.e. proper citation), inserting the author's words as your own, using or "borrowing" another student's work, buying a paper from a professional service, etc. It is your responsibility to be familiar with what constitutes plagiarism and, in the event of uncertainty, to ask in a constructive manner about a writing in question before it is due in a final version. You are also required to keep all note cards and rough drafts on papers and assignments until given a final grade for that course. Evidence of plagiarism and cheating will be dealt with in accordance with the college policy on academic honesty found in the Student Handbook. Please read this policy in its entirety. In the event of a suspected infraction – in fairness to your peers and the standards of the college – it is my job to send the materials in question to the Dean's Office at which time you are given the chance to provide your perspective on the matter.

THE WRITING CENTER

The Writing Center is a free resource for improving your writing. At the Writing Center, trained Moravian students can help you figure out assignments and improve your writing. They can help at any stage of the writing process, whether you haven't started the assignment and need help picking a topic, or you're near the end and want to check that everything is in order. And it's not just for help with Writing 100 or English papers—any type of writing can be taken there, including science reports and cover letters. The tutors will first work with you to make sure that all the bigger issues are covered, such as proper citation, fulfilling the assignment, and structure of the paper. Then, they can also help you with spelling, grammar, and mechanics. You can sign up for a half-hour or an hour-long appointment. After your appointment, the tutor you work with will send me a progress report, letting me know that you were there. The Writing Center is on the second floor of Zinzendorf Hall and the extension is 1592. Their hours vary each semester, but they are generally open Monday-Thursday afternoons and evenings, and Sunday evening. Watch your email for an announcement about when the Writing Center opens, generally the third week of the term, which will also include the hours.
