Availability: Best time for a conference is immediately before or after class. If this is inconvenient, a meeting can be scheduled.

Course Objectives

Design is and will continue to be aesthetic communication integral to human life and progress; design has the unique power not only to inhabit our daily life but to change it. Students will gain an aesthetic and historical understanding of the movements, schools, styles and artists, beginning from the western tradition, which form the ongoing creation of Contemporary Design. The genres of graphic art, product design, and decorative art will be emphasized, with an inclusion of related trends in painting, sculpture, theatre, and architecture. In written aesthetic assignments, reviews, and oral peer discussions and presentations, students will apply critical, aesthetic, historical and original perspectives to works of Contemporary Design.

Required Texts for purchase

Jonathan M. Woodham, Twentieth Century Design, New York: Oxford University Press, 1997.

Carman Gorman, Editor, The Industrial Design Reader, New York: Allworth Press, 2004.

Course Goals

- Students will apply Modern and Contemporary historical, cultural and aesthetic influences to analyze design movements, schools, styles, artists and works verbally and orally
- Students will deepen their aesthetic and comparative historical understanding of Contemporary Design by field trips to key regional and national sites, exhibits and museums
- Students will identify the aesthetic and technological innovations of styles, trends and key designers of Twenty First Century Design through a predictive historical approach

Papers: there will be Aesthetic Analyses required on two different topics.

Criteria for these will be given beforehand. Design Aesthetic Analysis I is 15%, and Design Field Analysis II is worth 20%.

Peer Seminar I and II: both comprise 35%. Peer Seminar I, worth 15%, is an individual power point presentation comparing a work of Modern Design to a Twenty First Century one; 7% presentation, 8% written. Peer Seminar II, 20% of your grade, 10% for each component, is an individual student power point presentation comparing a work of Contemporary Design which is successful to one which is not. Criteria for each will be given beforehand.

Final Project: A group power point presentation will show the aesthetic, cultural and historical influences of each group's choice for Classics of Contemporary Design. The ranking of the Classics will be voted on by their peers. The Final Project/Classics of Contemporary Design counts for 25%, presentation 10% and the written component by each member, 15%.
