Course Description:

This course provides a general introduction to U.S. history since 1865. We will focus in particular on four interrelated themes:

- 1.) The Economy: We will discuss how Americans have been shaped by and have attempted to shape the tremendous power of corporate capitalism. How have Americans tried to balance the pursuit of profits with the ideal of democratic participation in society? What roles have Americans believed the government should play in regulating the economy and why?
- 2.) Politics: We will consider the multiple forms that political participation has taken. How have people in the U.S. attempted to shape the future through political participation? How responsive have government officials been to the voices of members of the population?
- 3.) Culture: We will discuss the attempts different groups of people have made during the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries to define what it means to be American. How have various groups of Americans responded to the diversity of the nation? How have Americans attempted to expand or limit what it means to be American?
- 4.) International connections: We will consider the roles the United States has played on the world stage and the implications of U.S. foreign policy for people at home and abroad. What connects and divides Americans and others in the world?

We will enrich our study of modern U.S. history by studying not just history books but also historical materials (primary sources) from the years we discuss. Historians rely on primary sources—such as documents, photographs and artifacts—to make sense of the past. Our class will spend considerable time learning and practicing the ways historians interpret primary sources. The papers you write for the course will involve primary-source analysis, and, at the end of the semester, you will have the opportunity to further hone your skills by interpreting a primary source from your own family’s history. Because in this course you will be learning about and using the methodologies employed by historians, the class satisfies the M1 LinC requirement.

Please Note: This is a college-level history course, and, as such, it differs in many ways from high school classes. In particular, the reading load is heavy. You should anticipate spending at least 3 hours before each class meeting reading your assignment—sometimes more. You will read various types of materials for the course, and we will discuss in class techniques for reading effectively. Please arrive at each class prepared to discuss the readings assigned for that day.

Learning Goals:

By the end of the course, students should have improved their ability to:

- 1.) Identify chronologically major events in modern U.S. history. The first step to understanding and interpreting history is knowing what happened and the order in which major events happened. You will not be required to memorize dozens of dates in this class, but you will be expected to recall and describe significant events and list major events in chronological order.

- 2.) Describe and analyze the often conflicting responses diverse groups of people living in the U.S. have had to changes and key events in American economic, political, cultural and diplomatic history.
- 3.) Analyze and interpret primary sources. You will gain experience approaching documents, photographs, artifacts and other primary sources with a critical eye, mindful of the types of questions historians ask of sources to interpret their significance and attentive to what they reveal about the course of history.
- 4.) Write thesis-driven essays composed of paragraphs with identifiable and logically-linked arguments that incorporate knowledge gleaned from primary historical sources.
- 5.) Articulate your opinions clearly in the presence of your peers. We will spend some of our class time engaging in discussion. Over the course of the semester you should become increasingly comfortable expressing your opinions publicly and articulating them effectively.
- 6.) Think and read critically. As you analyze primary sources, you will have to think carefully about the assumptions their creators have made and the points of view they are trying to convince you to believe. The critical thinking and reading skills you develop should help you become more discerning interpreters of the information you encounter in all aspects of your life.

Required Readings:

- 1.) Books:

James L. Roark, et. al., The American Promise: A Compact History, Volume 2 From 1865, 4th edition (Bedford/ St. Martin's, 2010).

Jacob Riis, How the Other Half Lives, edited by David Leviatin (New York: Bedford/St. Martin's, 2011).

Melba Beals, Warriors Don't Cry: A Searing Memoir of the Battle to Integrate Little Rock's Central High (Washington Square Press, 1995).

- 2.) Primary Source Reader- Available on Blackboard. You must print the entire reader (about 100 pages).

Assignments and Exams:

Paper One: 15%

Midterm: 20%

Paper Two: 20%

Virtual Family Album: 10%

Final: 25%

Participation and Quizzes: 10%

Attendance, Make-Up Exams and Late Papers:

Class attendance is critical to your performance in this class. Attendance will be monitored, and unexcused absences will be frowned upon and imperil students' participation grade. Students who accrue three or more unexcused absences run the risk of having their final grade lowered a full step (i.e. A to B, B to C, etc.).

There will be no make-up exams unless arranged in advance with the professor. Make-ups will only be administered in cases of personal or medical emergencies. Except in exceptional circumstances, reading quizzes cannot be made up.

Students will be penalized for turning in papers late. Grades will be lowered by 1/3 of a grade for each day a paper is late. In other words, an A paper will become an A- paper if it is one day late, a B+ paper if it is two days late, etc.

Academic Honesty:

Plagiarism or any other form of academic misconduct will be dealt with in accordance with Moravian College's Academic Honesty Policy as described in the Student Handbook.

Laptop and Handheld-Devices Policy

As the use of laptops in the classroom has increased in recent years, so too has the temptation for students to use them for purposes unrelated to the course. Students who succumb to the lure of games or the internet, however, miss important course material, distract their classmates and frustrate their professors. As a result, the participation grade of students found to be using laptops for purposes not related to the course will be lowered a full letter grade for each infraction. Similarly, the participation grade of students found to be using hand-held devices for non-emergencies will be lowered a full grade for each infraction. Let's spend the short time we're in class together analyzing, discussing and learning about history.

Disability Policy:

Students who wish to request accommodations in this class for a disability should contact Elaine Mara, assistant director of learning services for academic and disability support at 1307 Main Street, or by calling 610-861-1510. Accommodations cannot be provided until authorization is received from the Academic Support Center.
