We will begin our study of political thinking in the depths of Plato's cave. Our concern will be to sort out the consequences of how we think about politics.

- How should I think about the world?
- What should I do? What should we do?
- How should we encounter one another?
- How should we arrange our lives together?
- Who should rule?
- What are the legitimate limits of political or state power?

These questions share a concern for norms. The emphasis falls on one recurring word: should. This means that normative political theory investigates situations in which knowing the facts will not suffice. Normative theory must address unclear, conflictual, or otherwise complex situations. This means that students of political theory must engage obligations and values as explicit sites of inquiry. To do this, we must attend to our texts with care. I invite you to find the connections between texts that have held the attention of political theorists over time and your present day experience of the personal and the political. True to the liberal arts tradition, our group will engage in close readings of the text as well as argumentative discussion. This course satisfies the Ultimate Questions (M3) requirements of the Learning in Common Curriculum (LinC) and is required for all Political Science majors.

Course objectives:

- 1) To reflect on the conditions and practices of consciousness
- 2) To gain critical distance from naïve realism
- 3) To expand and deepen an account of the political
- 4) To reflect on language usage inside and outside of the classroom
- 5) To acquire canonical and contemporary literacy in political theory
- 6) To ask critical questions regarding political matters
- 7) To improve verbal and written expression with reference to textual evidence
- 8) To acquire note taking skills and to create a commonplace book

Commonplace Book Notes: Learning by Writing

Preparation:

- Carefully complete your assigned reading ahead of writing notes.
- A simple ballpoint pen is recommended to reduce smearing while writing.
- Scheduling: it should take between one and two hours for the first few entries to become accustomed to the process. Later entries will take between 30 and 45 minutes (possibly less) to complete.

Required elements, standard formal entry:

- Date all notes by writing out the day, the month, and the year. Your first date will be Tuesday, 2nd September 2014.
- Include full bibliographic information for notes that begin discussion on a new text. For example:
Michael Pollan, The Omnivore's Dilemma: A Natural History of Four Meals. New York: Penguin, 2006.
Please consult the Chicago manual of style website or similar sources for citation rules www.chicagomanualofstyle.org.
- Include in each new set of notes the full name of the author(s)
 - Look up birth and death dates of each author including cities and countries.
 - Identify unknown words, look up definitions, and record.
 - Identify the thesis or central concern of each reading.
 - Look up two contextual historical events during the lifetime of the author and note them.
- Write out three passages of your choice. Passages should consist of three to five lines of text. Identify the page number and follow each passage with a question or a comment for discussion in class.

Required elements, reflection page:

- Reflect on your reading. Compose a single thoughtful page.
 - This reflection will describe your thought process and the questions, comments, and connections to other texts or ideas that you make while reading. Own your thought.

Write notes clearly and neatly.

Evaluation:

- Commonplace books will be collected sporadically throughout the semester.
- Individual entries will receive a ✓+ ; ✓ ; or a zero. A final grade will be given for the book.
- Over the course of the semester, a complete set of notes might easily reach 50 to 70 pages of handwriting.
